

Fossil Extraction Free Community

Sarayaku is a Kichwa community and sovereign territory in the Ecuadorian Amazon that successfully resisted plans to extract oil from its land. After a long struggle on the ground and in courts, Sarayaku's 1,500 inhabitants won the right to stay a Fossil Extraction Free Zone.

Image: @angievanessita

Fossil Extraction Free Community

1996

The Ecuadorian state grants a concession for a large portion of Sarayaku territory to the Argentine oil company CGC.

2000

CGC enters the territory by force with a military escort to drill, plant explosives and conduct seismic prospecting. The Sarayaku resist and force the company to abandon their project.

Ternitor io

2003

Sarayaku takes the case to the Inter-American Commission on Human Rights (IACHR) with a claim against the Ecuadorian State.

2010

IACHR concludes that Ecuador violated (among others) the rights to life, integrity, property and judicial guarantees and issues a series of recommendations to the Ecuadorian state.

Fossil Extraction Free Community

Sarayaku's successful efforts to stop oil activities on their lands have kept an estimated

100 MILLION BARRELS

of oil in the ground.

In 2018, Sarayaku declares its territory a Kawsak Sacha (Living Forest): a living and conscious being, subject to rights.

The Sarayaku build reciprocal relationships with the Sacha runakuna (visible and invisible inhabitants of the forest), thus establishing and putting into practice the concept of Sumak Kawsay: life in harmony.

Image: @angievanessita

Learn more

SARAYAKU.ORG WEBSITE

KAWSAK SACHA, SARAYAKU, LIVING FOREST

'CHILDREN OF THE JAGUAR', DOCUMENTARY BY THE SARAYAKU, FOLLOWING THEM TO THE INTER-AMERICAN COURT OF HUMAN RIGHTS

TERRITORIES OF LIFE REPORT

Fossil Extraction Free Community

"Sarayaku is a living land. It is a living jungle. There are trees and medicinal plants and all kinds of beings. All those who want to do harm, do not know what they are doing."

Patricia Gualinga